Irvine, California-based Wimberly Interiors has added seven positions as part of its global expansion.

Terry Henriksen has been appointed studio director in Singapore. Henriksen will lead a team of creative designers as part of the firm's vision to further penetrate the Asian market. Henriksen previously served as director of Gold Mantis, president of Henriksen Design, and a partner at HBA.

"Terry is one of the rare breed of designers who can not only impress clients with truly unique design solutions, but he effortlessly translates his imaginative designs into reality," says Margaret McMahon, managing director of Wimberly Interiors. "I am particularly impressed by the stunning sketch renderings he produces to articulate his vision."

Tomoko Day also joins Henriksen in the Singapore studio as design director. Day has developed a signature aesthetic that draws inspiration from her artistic passion with pottery, textile design, and photography. She has worked with Henriksen at Gold Mantis and Henriksen Design, and previously was a designer with Barry Design Associates and SFA Design.

Mark James has joined the London studio as senior associate. His perspective and experience with creative agency Sedley Place will allow him to infuse the narrative of brand pillars into the interior design and guest experience. James is inspired by the cultural influences of destinations around the globe and how they can be reinterpreted in a relevant design vernacular.

In the Los Angeles Studio, Tim Zebrowski has been appointed creative director. Zebrowski's design philosophy balances personal attention with a distinctive design that embraces refinement and style. He previously served as principal of Zebrowski Design Group and director of HBA's London studio.

The Honolulu studio welcomes Ralf Sebecke as creative director. Sebecke has lived and worked around the globe with Blue Plate Studio in Singapore and Wilson Associates in Johannesburg and Dallas. Sebecke's design specialty includes specialty restaurants, mixed-use resorts, and residential projects.

Ari Suryanto joins Sebecke in Honolulu as senior designer. Suryanto has specialized in renovation and historic preservation for hospitality projects and was previously with Carlyn & Company and HVS Compass Design.

Shaleah Soliven joins Sebecke and Suryanto in Honolulu as a designer. Soliven was featured on HGTV's Design Trends and was previously with Gensler.

"I am extremely optimistic as we continue on this path to expand and differentiate Wimberly Interiors," comments McMahon. "We are fortunate to attract these multi-faceted designers to complement our talented and creative team."
